

TRANSCRIPT PREPARED BY THE CLERK OF THE LEGISLATURE
Transcriber's Office

February 28, 2000 LR 291

them. I just haven't had the time, but as I was going to say, when I come after these people, I get the facts first. I have to be satisfied, in my mind, that the allegations made are true, especially because they are so serious and they reflect in such a terrible way on the integrity and reputation of the individual accused. So I must first be thoroughly persuaded that the allegations are true. I don't care whether the Judicial Qualifications Commission supposedly has had a complaint filed with them because they are not going to do anything. I am not deterred when the complainant says that she has talked to other judges because they are not going to do anything. So all of that is aside. I then look at the code of judicial responsibility, which I probably know better than anybody in this state. It's the Code of Judicial Conduct, and I select those portions of the code which this conduct violates. Then I go into the Law Library and I do exhaustive and exhausting legal research on every one of those provisions of the code, and everyone of those fact situations to find cases that have dealt with those precise items. And the only cases that are reported that I make use of are those of Supreme Courts of various states or the highest Appellate Courts below the Supreme Court, and in some cases those that come from the U.S. jurisdiction. After I get the facts, comb through the Code of Judicial Conduct, and do this legal research, then I go through the painstaking work of drafting a legal brief. And when I get through weaving my net, you could compare me to a fowler, that's one who catches birds. Birds don't escape from this fowler's net. Once they are enmeshed, there is no escape, and it is because their conduct is so egregious and reprehensible. So this individual, Bartu, has been purged from the rolls of the legal profession in this state. Had I not acted, he would still be there. You will see from the article that is attached as the second page that a woman filed a federal lawsuit against Bartu, and do you know that the state hired the lawyers and paid tens of thousands of dollars to defend...

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...Bartu? Several lawyers from the Attorney General's Office, and of the private firm of Cline, Williams were all brought together to defend Bartu. Two former Chief Justices testified in his behalf, and they knew what he had